Animal idioms (习语) teach us about life, human nature, and the world around us.

____34____

This idiom started from old markets in Europe in the 1700s. People sold baby pigs in bags. But bad sellers sometimes put cheaper animals like cats inside. If buyers opened the bags too soon, the cats would jump out—just like when someone lets the truth out without meaning to!

____35____

The idiom was first used in the 1800s. Riders had to use ropes to control how fast the horses went. Just like those riders, we sometimes need to slow ourselves down or remind others to think carefully before acting.

____36____

The idiom first appeared in early 20th-century novels to describe nervous and excited feelings. Imagine preparing for a big moment—your heart beats heavily, and your stomach dances wildly, as if butterflies were flying inside you.

____37____

This idiom came from an ancient Greek story over 2,000 years ago. It told of a man failing to notice a snake in the grass and then getting hurt. Just like people walking in tall grass carefully, this idiom reminds us to watch out for hidden risks.

____38____

The idiom became famous in 1603. It tells us that everyone can shine, even after dark times. Imagine your pet dog waiting for its turn to play—this idiom shows us good things come with time.

A. Hold (拉住) Your Horses

B. Every Dog Has Its Day

C. Let the Cat Out of the Bag

D. A Snake in the Grass

E. Butterflies in Your Stomach

(B)

请阅读下面语篇，从每小题所给的 A、B、C 三个选项中，选出一个最佳选项。

The 2025 CCTV Spring Festival Gala showed old traditions and modern technology. New ideas made culture lively.

In YangBOT, 16 human-like robot dancers, named Fu Xi (after an ancient Chinese god), danced with the same number of human dancers to create a new style of the Shaanxi Yangge dance. Everyone was surprised to see the robots perform difficult actions. With AI, every dance move was broken into 327 steps. And smart controls also helped robots match humans almost perfectly. The robots didn't just copy humans—they protected and passed down the traditional art with technology.	Another popular show was Ying Fu. 500 drones（无人机）flew in the sky, using QLED screens to create a huge paper-cutting artwork. A child "lit" fireworks in the picture. AR technology created bright lights dancing on people's smartphones. People pointed their phones at the performing area. They could see AR paper-cutting models. They could "build" shapes like playing with blocks! As one fan said, "It's so fantastic to join in and play with art!" Technology made old art exciting and easy for everyone to experience.

39. How many dancers were there all together in YangBOT?

A. 32. B. 24. C. 16.

40. How did the robots perform the dance moves so perfectly?

A. By using smart controls.

B. With human dancers' help.

C. By practicing hard again and again.

41. What could people do when enjoying Ying Fu?

A. They could join in the show.

B. They could control the drones by themselves.

C. They could enjoy fireworks created by drones.

42. What did YangBOT and Ying Fu have in common?

A. They both showed modern art.

B. They both shared art with technology.

C. They both allowed people to play with art.

43. What does the passage mainly show us?

A. The Spring Festival Gala is always fun.

B. Robots will take the place of human dancers.

C. New technology helps save and share old culture.

Charlotte's Web, written by E. B. White, is a touching story about the friendship between a pig and a spider. Since it came out in 1952, it has become a beloved book for readers of all ages.

The book starts with a little pig, Wilbur. A girl named Fern saves him and takes care of him. Later, Wilbur moves to a farm where he meets Charlotte, a clever spider. When Wilbur learns he might be killed, Charlotte promises to save him.

Charlotte writes words like "Some Pig" and "Terrific" in her web to make people think Wilbur is special. At a county fair (集市), her final message "Humble" wins Wilbur a prize, making sure he will never be hurt. Sadly, Charlotte dies after leaving 514 eggs behind. Wilbur, though heartbroken, protects her eggs all winter. In spring, three baby spiders stay with him, carrying on Charlotte's love.

The book's language is simple but beautiful. White describes the farm with words like "the smell of hay (干草)" or "the sound of geese", making readers feel as if they were standing right there. The talks between animals are funny and warm. For example, the sheep lets Wilbur know there's danger, and the goose talks in a silly way. These characters make the story lively.

When Charlotte dies at the end, readers feel sad but also remember her words, "You have been my friend. That in itself is a great thing." The story reminds us that good friends stay in our hearts forever.

44. How long has it been since Charlotte's Web came out?

A. For over 70 years.

B. For about 90 years.

C. For less than 50 years.

45. What's Charlotte like?

A. Creative and strict.

B. Friendly and helpful.

C. Funny and hard-working.

46. How does Charlotte save Wilbur's life?

A. By finding food for him.

B. By hiding him on the farm.

C. By writing words on her web.

47. Why does White use words like "the sound of geese" to describe the farm?

A. To tell how geese live.

B. To bring readers to the scene.

C. To show animals talk differently.

48. What does the writer want to remind us?

A. Time makes great changes.

B. Hope for the best, but prepare for the worst.

C. The relationship between friends will last forever.

Having a pet can bring many wonderful things to our lives. More and more studies show that pets are not just cute friends. ____49____

For children, taking care of a pet teaches them important skills. They learn to be responsible (有责任心的) by feeding their pets or cleaning their living spaces. ____50____ For example, some children find it easier to read out loud to a pet because pets listen without judging (评价). Playing with pets also helps children make friends with others.

____51____ Many young people feel worried because of work, but spending time with a pet can make them feel less worried. For older people, pets are great friends. They help fight loneliness and give the old a reason to smile every day.

Moreover, pets teach us about kindness. When we feel sad, they comfort us with soft touches. When we fail in something, they always stay by our side ... They keep loving us no matter what happens. ____52____

Keeping a pet is good for everyone in the family. Pets remind us of what truly matters. ____53____ It can bring love and happiness.

A But keeping pets takes time.

B. Adults can also get a lot from pets.

C. Pets can even help children do better.

D. They help us stay healthy and happy too!

E. This helps us become more caring people.

F. Why not welcome a cute friend into your home?

Good sleep is important for everyone, and it is really important for teenagers. They need 9 to 10 hours of sleep each day—more than adults, said the US National Institute of Health. This is because adolescence (青春期) is a time of great growth and change.

Scientists did a study. There were two groups: one group slept well, while the other one didn't. Then, they compared the creative performance (表现) between the two groups. The second group did worse in creative thinking. They couldn't think of new ideas.

For students, enough sleep plays a key role. It helps them create good feelings and learn better in class. It also helps them become more creative.

However, most of the young students face sleep problems. They can't get enough sleep. Keep reading to learn some of their stories and find useful advice on better sleep!

Emma, 14 years old	I can't sleep well when I study for exams. My mind races with worries. To get enough sleep, I write down my worries on paper before bed to clear my thoughts. Besides, I do some simple exercise to relax my body. Sometimes when I talk to friends or family about my feelings, I feel peaceful.
Tom, 14 years old	I used to stay up very late because of school homework. I often couldn't go to sleep until midnight. Then my teacher told me the way to make good use of my time. Now I do homework right after dinner and take short breaks every 30 minutes. Before bed, I always listen to natural sounds like the sounds of rain or birds for 15 minutes. And I can fall asleep 2 hours earlier than before.
Jack, 15 years old	Tests make me so nervous that I always wake up in the middle of the night, and I can't fall asleep again. Last month, I moved my desk away from my bed. This way, I can stop myself from thinking about schoolwork when I'm trying to sleep. The small change makes my sleep deeper and longer.

54. Why do teenagers need to sleep more than adults each day?

55. What did the study in the text box try to find out?

56. When can Tom fall asleep now?

57. What do Emma and Jack have in common?

58. Do you have trouble sleeping? How do you deal with (应对) it?
